

Lombadina is a remote Aboriginal Community of 60 people at the northern end of the Dampier Peninsula. The hinterland of the community is characterised by white sandy beaches, clear blue Indian Ocean waters and mangrove lined tidal creeks.

Once a Mission settlement, Lombadina today is a working Aboriginal community aiming for self sufficiency through Community ventures which include a general store, artefact and craft shop, bakery and tourism.

The Bard people of Lombadina have strong links to the sea, a salt water heritage dating back thousands of years. This heritage is evident in economic activity, recreation, folklore and diet.

Stay with us in our accommodation and join one of our tours and your friendly local guide and host will help explain traditional ways, history and contemporary aspirations of this unique destination. No visit to Broome is complete without a taste of the Peninsula.
